ELEMENTARY PRINCIPLES OF MUSIC.

MUSICAL CHARACTERS are representatives of musical sounds; it is, therefore, of great importance to the pupil that these characters be well understood. A NOTE  has three principal qualities, which must be so well known to the student, as to be distinguished at sight: —

- 1st. In regard to pitch — how high or how low is it?
- 2d. In regard to length — how long or how short is it?
- 3d. In regard to force — how loud or how soft is it?

Notes have different values, and it is necessary that the value of each and its relation to others should be clearly understood. To accomplish this is the design of this little treatise, and should be the aim of every teacher. But more than this is necessary, and that is constant and patient practice, until the pupil can sing correctly at sight, without the help of an instrument.

THE STAFF.

This is the first thing made in the construction of a piece of music. The staff now generally used consists of five lines and four spaces, thus: —

These lines and spaces make nine degrees, which are counted from bottom to top. When more degrees are wanted, additional lines are made above or below the staff, thus: —

These are called added or leger lines.

THE CLEFS.

There are two clefs now in general use for vocal music; viz., the G clef, made thus,  and placed on the second line of the staff, and the F clef, thus,  placed on the fourth line of the staff. The latter is used for the Bass, or lowest male voices, and the former for Soprano, Alto and Tenor; but it represents the Tenor an octave higher than it should be. This has been done in order to save the pupil the trouble of learning the C clef, formerly in use for the highest male voices. But the use of the G clef need cause no embarrassment to the singer. Its only difficulty is in the harmony or counterpoint, where it is used "con licenza."

The staff, by itself, has no definite meaning in regard to the pitch of notes, but with the clef each line and space has its own peculiarity. These lines and spaces are named from the first seven letters of the Alphabet. Thus the G clef determines that all the notes on the second line where it is placed are G; hence the second space is A, the third line B, and so on.

EXAMPLE.

The same follows from the F clef: —

The G in the fourth space of the Bass staff, represents the lowest tone on the Violin. The G on the second line, in the G or Treble staff, is one octave above the first. The pupil must commit the foregoing to memory, so as to name the letters on each staff without hesitation.

THE SCALE

Is a succession of five tones and two semitones. There are two scales — the Major, or greater, and the Minor, or lesser. The difference in the two consists in this: the Major scale has the semitones between the 3d and 4th, and the 7th and 8th degrees, ascending and descending. In the Minor scale the semitones are between the 2d and 3d, and 7th and 8th, ascending, and between the 5th and 6th, and 2d and 3d, descending. The first is most used and should be well understood by the beginner before attempting the Minor. The scales are named from the letter on which they begin: if the first note is A, it is called the scale of A, and so with the other letters. The scale is subdivided into 12 semitones, each of which may be the foundation of a particular scale. Hence there are twelve Major and twelve Minor Scales, but they are not all used in vocal music.

OF NOTES.

These are characters placed upon the staff and indicate the pitch and duration of sound. They are as follows: — Semibreve,  Minim,  Crotchet,  Quaver,  Semiquaver,  Demisemiquaver,  The first is twice the length of the second, and so on, according to the following table: —

1 Semibreve		is equal to 2 Minims,
1 Minim		"	2 Crotchets,
1 Crotchet		"	2 Quavers,
1 Quaver		"	2 Semiquavers,
1 Semiquaver		"	2 Demisemiquavers,

TIME.

Notes, when placed upon the staff, are divided by means of bars, thus: —

During the performance of a piece, the same length of time is measured to each bar, and every bar has the same value in notes.

EXAMPLE.

In singing, Time is measured by motions of the hand, called beats, and these are 2, 3, or 4, in a bar, according to the time. Time is divided into three sorts, Common, Triple, and Compound. Common Time has two marks, $\frac{2}{4}$ and C. Triple Time has three marks, $\frac{3}{2}$, $\frac{3}{4}$, and $\frac{3}{8}$. Compound Time, two marks, $\frac{6}{4}$, and $\frac{6}{8}$. The lowest of these figures expresses the fractional part of a Semibreve, and the upper figure the number of these parts contained in a bar; thus, $\frac{2}{4}$ means two Crotchets in a bar; C, two minims, $\frac{3}{2}$ three minims; $\frac{6}{4}$, six Crotchets; and $\frac{6}{8}$, six quavers, or their equivalent.

ELEMENTARY PRINCIPLES OF MUSIC.

RESTS,

Or marks of silence, are characters to correspond with the different kinds of notes in use. They are as follows: Semibreve, ; Minim, ; Crotchet, ; Quaver, ; Semiquaver, ; and Demisemiquaver, ; and the same time must be allotted to these as to the notes they take the place of.

OF THE STAFF, CLEF, AND NOTES COMBINED.

These form the groundwork of a musical composition; disconnected, they are of no use, but united together, they are the only means of expressing musical sounds.

EXAMPLE.

THE SHARP, FLAT, AND NATURAL.

The Sharp #, when placed before a note, raises it one semitone. The Flat b, placed before a note, lowers it one semitone. The Natural ♮, before a note restores it to its original state, thus: —

In this example, the first and third notes are alike, but the second is a semitone higher than the other two. Sharps and Flats are used in the beginning of all pieces except in the key of C Major and A Minor: when so used, they are called Essential; but when used in the body of a composition, they are called Accidentals: in the first case, they affect the line or space in which they are written to the end of the piece; in the latter, they only apply to the bars in which they appear.

OF SOLMIZATION, OR SINGING BY SYLLABLES.

This is an artificial method of obtaining a correct enunciation of the tones and semitones of the Scale, which, if practised with care, diligence, and perseverance, will ultimately lead to a correct and pleasing style of performance; it also enables the singer to do his part as well in one key as another.

The following table exhibits the different keys, most in use, with the syllables to each. These should be committed to memory, and afterwards applied to the exercises in various keys, on page 10.

The teacher should explain the intervals, and the relation they have to the key note in the different Scales — observing that the semitones are always between the syllables Mi, Fa, and Si, Do.

OTHER CHARACTERS USED IN VOCAL MUSIC.

The Slur  binds two or more notes together, thus :—

The notes so bound together are to be sung to one syllable. Staccato marks , indicate that the notes over which they are placed are to be pronounced short and in about one half the usual time.

EXAMPLE.

To be sung as if written thus :—

The term Legato means the reverse of Staccato, viz., that the notes are to be held their exact length.

THE DOT.

The character placed after a note or rest increases its length one half; hence, a dotted Minim is equal to three Crotchets; a dotted Crotchet is equal to three Quavers, &c.

EXAMPLE.

A Double Bar  is used to divide the different subjects of the piece, and a dash after the Double Bar, thus,  shows a final close.

The Repeat, , is a sign that what is contained within these marks is to be sung twice, the same as if the notes had been twice written.

The Pause  indicates that the notes over which it is written may be held at the pleasure of the performer. So when placed over a rest, . The Rest may be extended ad libitum. There are other signs used in vocal music, but these are all that are of importance, and more would only serve to embarrass the pupil and retard his progress.

The foregoing instructions have been rendered as plain and short as possible, in order that the pupil may commit them to memory : and it is hoped that no one who attempts to learn the art of singing will neglect this advice. A list of musical terms is added, with their definitions ; this concludes the explanatory part of this work. Those who wish to acquire proficiency and elegance in the art, should take private lessons of some competent teacher.

In singing Latin words, it is of the greatest importance that the vowels be correctly pronounced. The following is the rule, and must invariably be observed: A is like a in the word "father;" e, like a in the word "maker;" i, like e in the word "me;" o, as in "go;" and u, like "ou," but not like the English pronunciation "you." In the diphthongs, the last letter only is pronounced.

The following detached words contain most of the vowel sounds.

The first system of the musical score is in D major (two sharps). It consists of a vocal line on a single staff and a piano accompaniment on two staves. The vocal line begins with a whole rest followed by a half note 'ti.' and then continues with the lyrics 'Sur - ge - re qui cu - - rat qui cu - - rat po - - pu - lo: tu quæ'. The piano accompaniment features a steady eighth-note bass line and a more active treble line with various chords and melodic fragments.

The second system continues the musical piece. The vocal line has the lyrics 'ge - - nu - - is - - - ti, Na - tu - ra mi - ran - - te, tu - - - - - um'. The piano accompaniment continues with similar rhythmic patterns, including eighth-note bass lines and chordal textures in the treble.
